Death of Joseph Griswold at Green field, Mass.

Word has been received here of the death of Joseph Griswold, 76, of Green-field, Mass., Monday morning. Mr. Griswold was a former resident of Mystic and was the son of Mystic and was the son of Joseph Griswold and the cousin of Mrs. B. F. Williams. Mr. Griswold at one time owned the farm now accupied by B. F. Williams and the land now known as the Industrial place, where he was engaged for several years in farming and raising tobacco. He married Miss Fanny Cottrell, daughter of John Cottrell of Mystic, and about forty years ago moved to Greenfield where he was engaged in the cotton business. He and his brother were owners of cotton mills at Turners Falls, Cold Spring and Griswoldville, Mass. His body will be brought here for burial Thursday afternoon in Elm Grove cemetery.

NTERESTING FACTS OF EARLY DAYS OF PROFESSIONAL BASEBA

Expenses of the League From 1875 Were $475.50-Receipts Were $8212.

New York, Feb. 22 .- A number of interesting references were made to the early days of professional baseball at the recent "Anniversary Dinner" of the National league in New York city. None attracted greater attention than the reading of the finances of the senior organization for its initial year. The report showed that the receipts The report showed that the receipts of the leagee amounted to $821.82. Each of the eight clubs forming the association contributed one hundred dollars and a sporting goods firm the

The expenses of the league for the year 1875 was $475.50 leaving a bal-ance of $346.32. The chief item of expense was the salary of $400 paid to Nick Young, who served as secretary and treasurer, during the first year of the league's existence, ostage ac-counted for $17.25 with stamps costing three cents in those days. Stationary amounted to $20.45; score sheets $6.55; record book $4.50, and a post office box $4.75. There were a few stray items for telegrams, pins and other office appurtances, but no mention of rent.

As opposed to this statement the financial report of the National Basebass commission for 1914 gives an ex-cellent idea of the growth of the busi-cellent idea of the growth of the business end of the game. The National League in 1875 was the dominating factor in baseball just as the National Commission is the supreme court of the game today. At the end of 1913 the National Commission had a balance of $27,709.03. The receipts from all sources during 1914 amounted to $41,955.12 giving a total of $69,664.15. Owing to the baseball are and other unusual and unsettled conditions the expenses of the commission were far above normal. The books show that during 1914 the dishursements of the commission amounted to $58,178.08. The receipts from anounted to $58,178.08. These expenses, which were rouhly three times larger than in 1911, cover a large field of activity such as Nick Young never dreamed of and were due to the growth of the fame and the conflict that waged for its control. The National Commission paid $26,217.12 for salaries and $14,248.39 for legal fees alone in 1914. Advertising and the alone in 1914. Advertising and the expenses of members of the commission cost $3,271; and $3,542.06 respectively. Stationary, printing and type-writing service ran up to $1,092.02. Office rent was $1,248 and postage $428, as against $17.25 for the National league in 1875. These figures testify mutely to the development of America's national sport ca's national sport.

Letter to the Sporting Editor Taftville, Conn. Feb. 21, 1916 Sporting Editor—As secretary of the Taftville basketball club, I am com-pelled to comment on the recent pelled to comment on the recent game in Willimantic last Friday night. The Willimantic Chronicle's ments on the game, states that Cap-tain Murphy did more damage with his tin whistle and his dollar watch than he would have done had he been playing. We will take it for granted that it was a tin whistle and a dollar watch, but we feel sure that it was held by a one in the world can distrust his honesty. He attended right down to timekeeping while George Shepaum whom they claim is so honest was looking for a fight every time as Taftville man got a basket.

From the fact that we were warned by the Willimantic fans that the Em-eralds robbed a game recently from the All New Britains by making them play three minutes overtime, made us keep tabs on the time, and even more leaving a balance of $1,485.07 with which to start 1915.

These expenses, which were roundly there is a larger than the largest crowd they ever had.

I must say that the Willimantic fans can surely be proud of such a bunch of quitters.

Please take out your pencil and figure from twenty-seven minutes of the nour to three minutes of the hour with two and one-half minutes out for time

This game will go down on records of the Taftville team and the minds of the honest fans attending as a win for Taftville by the score of 27 to 25. JOHN B BENOIT, Secretary.

"I spent last New Year's day at Frank's big ranch at Humboldt, Ia., and the old boy looked just as good to me then as he ever did," said Williams. "That is, he looked tip top as far as external conditions go. He told me that right then he weighed about 227 pounds, stripped, which is about 15 or 16 pounds more than he weighed in his matches with Hackenschmidt. He will probably not train down much below 220 ever again, which would be about the weight at which he would meet Stecher. Gotch packs surplus weight in odd places. He never puts an ounce on his waist and he looks just as hard and straight there as in for any ordinary money. If he meets Stecher there will have to be a lot of money in it. Stecher's managers wouldn't let him cover the $25,000 check Frank posted with a Kansas City paper last fall, insisting that the boy wait a year. Stecher wanted to cover it, though. I'll say that for the kid, and from what I hear—I have never seen him-he is a cyclone. die Smith, sporting editor of the Chi-cago American, told me the boy was really good, and that's the answer he gave me when I asked him if he thought Stecher would beat Frank, so Elwell, a member of the public utilities commission, who was soon at the scene of the wreck, said bearing upon what had happened: Inasmuch as the engineer, the fire men and the flagman, three important witnesses, are dead, it will be difficult witnesses, are dead, it will be difficult to fix the responsibility but a thorough investigation will probably bring out the responsibility."

The theory of the accident advanced by Mr. Eiwell is that Curtiss disregarded the cautionary signal two thousand feet east of the stalled train and when the dnger or "home" sig-nal came into view he could not make his brakes hold and No. 5 slid into No. 79. Mr. Elwell as inspector for the commission before his appointment to it had to investigate the many wrecks on this part of the system. Both Trains Well Filled With sengers.

Both trains were well filled with passengers. Many Yale alumni were ni No. 79 as they had attended alumni day at the University and were there last night for the annul meetings of the senior societies. They were returning to New York. Many of these have figured prominently in athletics at the university in years past. The local train had many on board who local train had many on board who were bound for Bridgeport to attend the dinner of the Sons of the American Revolution Others were commuters for Milford and other stations. Boiler of No. 5 Exploded

As the crash came the boiler of No. 5 exploded and hurtling through the air over the freight on the next track to the eastbound track, dropped right side up at the bottom of the deep em-bankment. The rest of the engine was a mass of twisted and splintered iron. The bodies of the fireman, engineer mangled and scalded, were picked ou of the wreckage.

Roadbed Covered With Debris. While the roadbed was not torn up while the roadbed was not torn up it was literally covered with the ruins of the engine and freight cars. Heavy iron brs were twisted like wire and steel frames of the rear coach of No. 79 were ripped apart, the wreckage of the three trains being piled up in a great junk heap. All around lay the furnishings of the coaches, applicated to be used in case of wrecks and ances to be used in case of wrecks and some personal belonging of passeng-ers. Snow beside the tracks was stained with blood.

Bodies Under Rear Coach. The rear coach of the express split wide open was thrown across moving freight, crushing these partly down and then falling over the eastbound tracks. Caught under it were the bodies of Miss Susan B. Hy-land of New Haven and of the man believed to be Madirios Der Hovhanessian, a student at Yale. Late in the afternoon this car was raised sufficiently to permit of removal of the bodies and they were taken to a morgue here.

had been partly overturned was lifted and dropped down the bank and trucks which had been wrenched from the coaches were placed on gondolas and hauled away and the overturned coaches righted. In the late after-noon the railroad police roped off the right of way to keep out of the dang-er zone the hundreds who came by automobiles, sleighs, trolleys and on oot to view the wreck. Tonight the ine was being rapidly cleared.

Physicians and Nurses on Scene.

Coroner Mix was among the early coroner and was among the early arrivals. At the same time many physicians from New Haven and Bridgeport with hospital nurses were on the scene to render aid in carry-ing the injured back to the various ospitals.

The coroner said that he was unable o say when the inquest will be opened ub probably it will start without delay. Among those hurt was Dr. R. G. Good-year, medical examiner of North Haven, who viewed the bodies taken from the North Haven wreck in 1913. Miss Hyland's Body Identified by Seatmate.

suffering from a gash in his scalp, which was treated by a surgeon.
"We were in the second coach," said O'Brien in relating their experiences. 'The train was running about twenty minutes behind schedule time, the collision occurred our Po seemed to rise in the air and then was carried over on an angle of 45 de-grees. A cement upright prevented the car from toppling down the embankment. "The steel construction of the car undoubtedly saved the lives of the passengers. The force of the collision passengers. The force of the collision was terrific."

O'Brien, Kilpatrick and Corey found a Mrs. Harmon and her three small children in one of the coaches. The mother was suffering from a scalp wound and the two younger children were cut about the face. The third escaped uninjured. The three men took Mrs. Harmon and the children to a farmhouse where they hired a a farmhouse, where they hired a sleigh and drove them to Milford. From Milford they took a trolley to Bridgeport.

STATEMENT MADE

BY HOWARD ELLIOTT. Every Facility Will Be Given to Get Exact Cause of Wreck.

Boston, Feb. 22.—Howard Elliott, chairman of the board of directors of the New York, New Haven and Hart-ford railroad, made the following statement here tonight concerning the wreck at Milford: "The management and the men are greatly distressed at the sad acci-dent. No statement can be made at "The accident occurred on a part of the road where no expense has been spared to perfect the physical facil-ities. The shops of the company have been running on good time for months and locomotives and passenger equipment kept in good order. The volume of business that the company volume of business that the company has been doing since September last has been for greater than ever before in its history nd the facilities of the road have been very severely taxed. Officers and men have been under a great strain in trying to give good service, especially since the unusual storms of December and with the great congestion of freight since then. Every effort has been made to encourage of-effort has been made to encourage of-ficers and men to do their very best with the difficult conditions now exist-ing, in the hope that accidents would be entirely avoided.

"Expenditures for care of the road, safety and the movement of the great volume of business as shown by the volume of business as shown by the prelimilary figures for January indicate that with an increase in gross earnings during the month of about $1,250,000 there was an increase in expense of nearly $900,000 which with heavily increased charges for freight car hire due to the congestion, leaves a very small margin out of this event. a very small margin out of this great increase to represent the use of the of passengers and men is to be deep-ly deployed and the sympathy of the management is with the families and friends of those who have suffered."

The magnitude of the big bowling tournament of the Atlantic Co Bowling association tournament, to eld in Washington, starting April 18. held in Washington, starting April 13, is just beginning to be appreciated by the bowlers of the country. The New England states are taking great interest in the affair, and will undoubtedly be well represented. This section of the country is responsible for the new organization, and one of the games popular in the north has for the first time been taken up this year by southerners. This is candiepins.
